Plaintiffs, XIXIANG YANG (“Yang”), LILING LIU (“Liu”), and QIQI XU (“Xu”) (each an individual “Plaintiff”, collectively the “Plaintiffs”), by and through their undersigned counsel, KELLEY & ASSOCIATES PLLC, brings this action individually and derivatively on behalf of Nominal Defendant GR SUPPLY CHAIN MANAGEMENT INC. (“GR Supply” or the “Company”) against its founder, Chief Executive Officer and President, ZHIYU LUO (“Luo”), and alleges upon personal knowledge as to themselves, upon information and belief as to all other matters, and based upon the investigation conducted by and through their attorneys as follows:

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. Corporate law professors across the country need only assign this single case to students when lecturing on issues of Director liability, piercing the corporate veil, alter-ego theory, breach of the fiduciary duties of care and loyalty, shareholder rights and violations of the federal securities laws – because Defendant Luo has run afoul of virtually every applicable law, failed to adhere to every conceivable standard, and disregarded every corporate formality in his villainous reign of dominance over the Company; and this is all prior to discovery.

2. This is a shareholder derivative action brought on behalf of the shareholders of GR Supply Chain Management Inc. against its Chief Executive Officer and President, Zhiyu Luo. Plaintiffs bring this action pursuant to CPLR Article 4, Section 624 & 626 of the New York Business Corporation Law, and New York common law to enforce Plaintiffs' rights to inspect certain books and records of Nominal Defendant GR Supply Chain Management Inc. for the purpose of discovering the extent of the wrongdoing GR Supply has committed, to identify which officers and directors may be held responsible for such wrongdoing, and to determine whether a demand upon the Company would be futile pursuant to N.Y. Business Corporations Law § 626(c), among other state law claims.

3. In addition, Plaintiffs bring this action to commence a shareholder derivative action pursuant to CPLR Article 4, the New York Business Corporation Law §§ 626 - 720, along with all other applicable sections of the New York Business Corporation Law, and New York common law; seeking judgment on numerous derivative claims on behalf of the Company, and relief in the form of declaratory judgment, equitable relief, punitive damages, and all other appropriate forms of relief. Judgement on these claims is appropriate as demand upon the corporation is unnecessary and futile pursuant to N.Y. Business Corporations Law § 626(c) and New York common law.

Lastly, Plaintiffs bring several direct claims as individuals based upon the New York state common law and violations of the federal securities laws promulgated under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the “Exchange Act”) in connection with fraud and the unauthorized sale of unregistered securities. and New York state common law.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

12. GR Supply is a privately held New York corporation primarily in the business of providing electronic recycling and waste removal services.

13. In addition to providing e-recycling and waste removal services, GR Supply generates income through the sale and distribution (often in bulk) of various types of electronic equipment and parts. GR Supply's inventory is stocked primarily by materials collected in the course of waste removal pick-ups and bulk purchase of such items from other recyclers and wholesalers. The remainder of the company's inventory is supplemented by the bulk purchase of electronic equipment and parts from online auctions, such as eBay.

14. GR Supply was incorporated and registered on April 11, 2014 by Zhiyu Luo. Luo assumed the title of President, as evidenced in the Company's 2014 tax return filings, attached hereto as Exhibit B. To date, no other documents have been furnished to identify any other directors or officers of GR Supply.

15. The Company's initial capital was acquired solely through investments made by Plaintiffs. In 2014 alone, Mr. Lou secured loans from Plaintiffs totaling no less than $105,821, as documented in GR Supply's 2014 tax return filings.

16. In consideration of their capital investments, Mr. Lou promised the Plaintiffs 90% of the Company's equity shares- also documented in GR Supply's 2014 tax return filings.

17. Throughout the Company's existence, Luo solicited several rounds of capital investments from Plaintiffs. The investments made by the Plaintiffs accounted for 100% of the Company's capital investments. Plaintiffs estimate that between the period of February 2014 and September 2015 the sum of their financial contributions to the Company exceeded $500,000.

18. Luo never registered the securities, nor did he duly offer the securities pursuant to any exception to registration.

19. Luo failed to provide the Plaintiffs with stock certificates, marketing materials, or formal documents that are routinely or customarily provided to investors.

20. Each individual Plaintiff holds 30% of the Company's voting shares; Luo holds the remaining 10%. However, Luo never arranged for a single Annual Meeting of the Shareholders and never provided the Plaintiffs an option for proxy voting.

21. Luo did not provide Plaintiffs with copies of the Certificate of Incorporation, Bylaws, Shareholder Agreement, or any of the Company's constitutive documents. In fact, it is believed that Luo completely failed to adhere to and observe corporate formalities and never created such documents.

22. Still, Lou repeatedly solicited ongoing capital investments from Plaintiffs, stating corporate purposes and relaying positive outlooks, forecasts, and assurances that business was picking up. This continued until late 2015.

23. In or around November 2015, Plaintiff Yang became suspicious of Luo's activities, management of the company, and trustworthiness.

24. Around that time, Yang was contacted by Zhang Yi ("Yi"), a customer of GR Supply.

25. Yi explained that he had a client account with GR Supply, and transferred to Luo a retainer of $100,000 for his account with the Company. The purpose of the account and retainer was to facilitate his bulk purchases of electronic goods from GR Supply. As Yi placed an order, the inventory would be shipped to him immediately, and the cost deducted from his retainer deposit.

26. Yi informed Plaintiff Yang that he placed an order for electronic goods from GR Supply, but upon delivery the contents were of a lesser quantity and lower quality than Luo had promised.

27. Yi requested a refund for the non-conforming goods and a refund of the remaining funds held in his retainer account. Luo denied both requests.

28. Additionally, in or around November 2015, a former employee of GR Supply informed Plaintiff Yang that Luo had directed personal associates, family members, and employees of GR Supply to sell items from the Company's inventory on online auctions such as Ebay and other channels. The proceeds from the sales were then diverted to Luo's personal accounts.

29. To make matters worse, Luo's thievery was not limited to the Company's inventory and cash. As Luo became aware of deals and discounts on electronic supplies and goods (items appropriate for GR Supply's inventory and the types of goods usually sold by the Company), instead of presenting the opportunities to the Company, Luo usurped, seized and acted on the opportunities for his own personal financial gain.

30. Defendant Luo's shady dealings and conduct has severely ruined the Company's reputation and tortuously interfered with the Company's contractual relationships. Luo's rampant looting of the Company's cash, assets, inventory and opportunities has severely damaged the Company and the Plaintiff shareholders. Luo on the other hand, has benefited greatly at the Company and Plaintiff's expense.

PLAINTIFFS' §624 DEMAND AND THE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE PARTIES

31. By letter dated December 17, 2015, Plaintiff Yang, as a representative of the class of Plaintiffs, made a written demand upon the Company pursuant to N.Y. Bus. Corp. Law § 624 and New York common law for the inspection of certain books and records ("the Demand" or "the Demand Letter"). The Demand Letter is attached hereto as Exhibit C.

32. The Demand sought the following categories of documents:

- The annual balance sheet and profit and loss statement for the preceding fiscal year;

- An interim balance sheet and/or profit and loss statement for the current fiscal year;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to pick-up and drop-off requests, assignments, or jobs;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to all receipts and invoices for services provided, inventory sold, inventory purchased, products sold, and products purchased;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to all of the Company's banking and financial accounts including, but not limited to all operating accounts, checking accounts, savings accounts, escrow accounts, brokerage accounts, and investments;
- All written or electronic documents or other records listing all of the Company's assets, investments, inventory, and any and all property in which the Company has an interest;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to and containing roster and payroll information for any and all employees, officers, directors, agents, contractors of the Company;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to all disbursements made to all individuals on behalf of the Company;
- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to all Company payments, reimbursements expenses, fees, or other disbursements made to, on behalf of, or directed by Zhiyu Luo; and

- All written or electronic documents or other records relating to all debt or equity investments, made to and by the Company, including the source, origin, and destination of such investments.

33. In the Demand Letter, Plaintiff Yang stated numerous proper purposes, any of which provided adequate justification for inspection and review of the requested documents. These include:

- a. Concern about the quality of the Company's corporate governance;
- b. To investigate potential misconduct, mismanagement, breaches of the fiduciary duties of care and loyalty, and fraud;
- c. To assess whether civil action is necessary;
- d. To explore if other remedial measures are appropriate; and
- e. To determine if certain actions rose to the level of criminal behavior.

34. Plaintiff Xixiang Yang made the demand in good faith, as evidenced by his statement that the demand was not for the purposes of acquiring or distributing shareholder information. Further, Plaintiff voluntarily offered to enter a confidentiality agreement, thereby pre-empting any reasonable objection that might be raised by the Defendants.

35. As set forth above, the Demand Letter stated proper purposes and otherwise complies with the requirements of § 624 of the New York Business Corporation Statutes and the New York common law.

36. On December 23, 2015, through legal counsel, Lou responded to the Demand Letter acknowledging receipt of the Demand Letter and stated that the requested inspection date was not adequate.

37. On December 28, 2015, through counsel, Lou further responded to the Demand via email acknowledging receipt of the Demand Letter, consenting to the demands, and requesting additional time beyond the requested December 28, 2015 deadline.

38. On the afternoon of December 28, 2015 counsel for Plaintiffs and Defendants, communicated via voice call. During the conversation, Defendants stated more time would be required to comply with the requests. Plaintiffs consented to grant more time with the stipulation that additional items be added to the demand list and that items be provided on a rolling basis (as they became available). Additionally, Plaintiffs provided further clarification as to the form in which certain items listed in the Demand could be delivered.

39. On December 29, 2015 Plaintiffs, by counsel, sent an email to formally convey the contents of the December 28, 2015 phone call, including clarification as to certain items listed in the Demand (such as clarification that deposit slips, bank statements, and copies of canceled checks be provided), the stipulation that the documents be provided on a rolling basis, and the additional items the parties agreed would be included in the list of Demands, such as the corporate minutes & bylaws, along with the constitutive documents relating to the operations, management and legal capacity of the Company.

40. On January 4, 2016, by counsel, Lou delivered what appeared to be some of the demanded items including one item labeled “Corporate Minutes & Bylaws.” However, upon review, the document was discovered to be blank. Defendants were immediately notified of the defect and asked again to deliver the Corporate Minutes & Bylaws. To this day, the requested documents have not been delivered.

41. On January 4, 2016, by counsel, Lou delivered the “Corporate Profit & Loss Statement” (the “P/L statement”) Exhibit D, “Corporate Bank Account Statement”, and “Corporate Lease.”

42. Upon review of the documents, numerous discrepancies were identified. Plaintiffs and Defendants, by their counsel, scheduled a conference call for January 5, 2016 to discuss the discrepancies and potential methods of resolving the matter.

43. On January 5, 2016, in advance of the scheduled conference call, Plaintiff’s counsel delivered to Lou and Defendant’s counsel a detailed listing of defects in the previously provided documents and outstanding items including the following:

- The monthly statement for the period of May 13,2014 – June 13,2014 missing from the corporate bank statement;
- Identifying a $100,000 discrepancy between the P/L Statements and corporate bank statement, and requesting documentation to explain the discrepancy;
- Scans and copies of checks and wire transfers to identify the nature of the payments.

In the alternative, the login information for online access to the business account to evaluate the nature of the myriad of debits and credits posted to the account;

- Restating the demand for copies of receipts;
- The name and contact information for the accounting firm that provided the accounting and auditing services for GR Supply;
- Restating the demand for an accounting of the Company’s assets; and
- Restating the demand for the Company’s main financial statements, specifically the balance sheet, income statement, and cash flow statement. With regards to the Balance sheet - the annual balance Sheet from the preceding year, and an interim balance Sheet for the current year.

44. Additionally, Plaintiffs offered to assist in the organization and duplication of the records and reminded Defendants that the demanded items had been pending for over 2 weeks.

45. A conference call was held later on the evening of January 5, 2016. The call was unproductive. Counsel for Plaintiffs requested an estimated date of delivery for the demand items and an audit of which items were not readily available or obtainable. Defendants' counsel refused to provide such an audit. The tenor of the discussion turned combative and the call ended abruptly.

46. With an hour following the call, Defendant's counsel called the Plaintiffs' counsel and informed that a list of GR Supply's employees' names and contact information would be prepared and delivered in the upcoming days, and the outstanding demand items would be assembled and delivered on a rolling basis as they became available. To date, none of the items has been produced.

47. Defendants continue to improperly refuse to grant Plaintiffs their statutory right of inspection. Defendants asserted no reason or purpose for refusing to grant Plaintiffs' inspection rights, failed to correct the discrepancies, and have made no attempts at communication.

48. At no point did Defendants question the validity of the Demand Letter or the itemized requests, raise issues or concerns as to the purpose of the Demand, challenge the Demand in whole or in part, request a reduction of the Demand items, or offer any explanation based in logic or law as to why the demanded items would not be delivered. Defendants have also failed to make any argument that the request was not reasonably related to the Plaintiffs' interests as shareholders.

49. GR Supply and Luo's response and actions constructively equate to a refusal to permit inspection of the requested corporate books and records.

50. By reason of the foregoing, combined with Luo's complete domination over the Company and his position as the sole Director and President, to issue any further requests or demands on the Board to take action would be futile.

DEFECTS IN DELIVERED DOCUMENTS

51. Among the few documents that were delivered was a Citibank corporate bank statement from Citibank. The document was intentionally redacted to exclude certain periods of time and transactions, as well as images of checks and information about the instruments that had been issued. The omitted information was requested multiple times, but never furnished.

52. The P/L sheet is incomplete, appears to contain numerous accounting errors which suggests suspicious activity and improper conduct. Copies of the Balance Sheet and Cash Flow Statement were requested, but never furnished.

53. Luo, by counsel, delivered what he identified as the Corporate Bylaws and Minutes. However, upon inspection the document turned out to be a blank. The actual Corporate Bylaws and Minutes were never furnished.

54. After reviewing the Company's financial reports and bank statements it is apparent that the Company's financial and accounting documents have been doctored by Luo to hide his rampant looting of the Company's accounts and inventory.

DERIVATIVE CLAIMS AND DEMAND FUTILITY

55. Plaintiffs brings this action as individuals and derivatively in the right and for the benefit of GR Supply to redress injuries suffered as a result of the Defendants' breaches of fiduciary duty, abuse of control, and gross mismanagement.

56. Plaintiffs and their counsel will adequately and fairly represent the interests of GR Supply in enforcing and prosecuting its rights.

57. Prior to filing, Plaintiffs, through their counsel, delivered a Demand Letter to Luo and GR Supply.

58. Plaintiffs were shareholders of GR Supply at the time of the wrongdoing complained of, has continuously been shareholders, and continues to be shareholders.

59. Based upon Luo's acts and omissions in direct violation of his fiduciary duties of care, good faith, honesty and loyalty, a pre-suit demand on GR Supply's Board to bring the claims asserted in this action is excused as a futile and useless act.

60. At all relative times, from the formation of GR Supply to the commencement of this action, Luo is the only Director of GR Supply's Board of Directors.

61. Luo personally profited from the wrongdoing alleged herein, personally orchestrated GR Supply's business and basked in the corporate culture of neglect, fraud, and wrongdoing described herein.

62. Luo exercised complete domination over the Company and failed to observe any semblance of corporate formalities.

63. Luo operated the company in a manner in which it had no individual existence of its own, but rather was an instrumentality for Luo to carry out activities for his personal dealings and purposes.

64. Further, as the Company's sole Director and President, Luo is incapable of making an impartial decision as to whether to bring suit, and the conduct at issue - which involves claims of misappropriation and waste of corporate assets, failure to observe to corporate formalities, unjust enrichment, negligence, self-dealing, and bad faith - is so egregious on its face that it could not have been the product of sound business judgement.

65. Defendant Luo is the Company's sole Officer and Director of record, which creates a situation whereby he himself would be responsible for any findings of Director misconduct. Therefore, Defendant Luo would be "interested" in (and therefore conflicted from and unable to fairly consider) a demand because of the likelihood that he would be liable for any findings of misconduct. In light of this, combined with Luo's response to the Plaintiff's Demand for Inspection of Books and Records – it is clear that any demand upon the Board of Directors is excused as futile.

66. One month following the last communication between the Plaintiffs and Defendants attorneys, without warning or notice Defendant Luo, in his sole discretion, effected the dissolution of GR Supply. None of the corporate funds or assets were distributed to the Plaintiff investors or accounted for. The Plaintiffs lost the entirety of their investments.

67. The dissolution of the Company was improper and cannot be duly effectuated absent approval from the Plaintiff shareholders – as a matter of law and equity.

BUSINESS JUDGEMENT RULE

68. As explained above and will be shown at trial, Luo engaged in conduct that was not a legitimate exercise of business judgment and/or is ultravires. Ultimately, the Company was damaged as a direct result of Defendant Lou's rampant misconduct, willful mismanagement, and lack of necessary internal controls. Therefore, the protections of the business judgment rule do not apply when reviewing Luo's actions or decisions in the management of the Company.

ALTER EGO & PIERCING THE CORPORATE VEIL

69. Luo exercised complete control and domination over the corporation and all of its transactions.

70. Luo used his domination of GR Supply to commit fraud and wrongs that directly and causally injured the Company and Plaintiffs.

71. Luo fraudulently provided the Plaintiffs with false statements and information concerning the business and finances of the Company. Luo knowingly omitted material information and facts about the Company in his communications with the Plaintiffs. He did so with the intent to deceive the Plaintiffs. The Plaintiffs relied on Luo's false statements. The Plaintiffs were damaged as a result.

72. To be clear – Defendant Luo had both total control of the company and used that control to perpetrate fraud and engage in misconduct that injured Plaintiffs and the Company.

73. At all relevant times, Luo operated GR Supply in a manner such that the individuality and separation between them ceased to exist. The Corporation's separate identity was so disregarded that it operated as Luo's alter ego.

74. Luo failed to adhere to the formalities required for the operation of a Corporation. There were no established or adopted Bylaws, stock certificates, Shareholder Agreements, Corporate Minutes, or adequate financial records.

75. Lou personally benefited from his wrongdoing and misconduct, accordingly Luo is personally liable for the resulting damage to Plaintiffs and the Nominal Defendant.
